
TERM MEMBER PROGRAM

The Stephen M. Kellen Term Member Program is designed to encourage promising young leaders to engage in a sustained conversation on international affairs and U.S. foreign policy. The program allows younger members to interact with seasoned foreign policy veterans as well as to participate in a wide variety of specially designed term member events. Each year a new class of vibrant individuals, all between the ages of 30 and 36, is elected to a five-year term membership. Committees of term members serve as advisory bodies to the Council leadership and provide term members with opportunities to help create programs of particular interest to them.

With almost sixty special events this past year, term members enjoyed a full range of meetings and activities in New York, Washington, DC, and Boston, including six off-site tours and trips. The year began with the directive to implement the recommendations of last year's Term Member Subcommittee of the Chairman's Advisory Council. As a result, the new class of term members saw an enhanced orientation process and an improved buddy system, and all term members benefited from increased interaction with life members, who were regularly invited to term member meetings. A life member mentoring program for third-year term members in New York and Washington, DC, was also established.

A highlight of the program year was the South Asia roundtable series, which was followed by a weeklong trip to India in February 2005 for a group of twenty-five term members, who benefited from numerous meetings with academic, business, government, and nongovernmental organization leaders in Bombay, Bangalore, and New Delhi. Other trips featuring high-level briefings included half-day visits to the U.S. Department of State; the U.S. Navy submarine base in New London, CT; the U.S. Coast Guard facility in Boston; the United Nations and the U.S. Mission to the United Nations in New York; and a two-day visit to Norfolk, VA.

Term members also benefited from several multi-session roundtables that facilitated in-depth discussions on issues ranging from the evolution of Islam in the United States, Europe, and Asia to the future of the global trading system. The Term Member Conference this year focused on the foreign policy challenges and opportunities facing the second Bush administration.

The Council will continue to rely on term members to help shape their program by organizing events throughout the coming program year, including another weeklong international trip in 2006.

Pilot Mentor Initiative

In response to a key recommendation that came out of last year's Chairman's Advisory Council review of the Term Member Program, the Council established a pilot mentor program between third-year term members in New York and Washington and life member volunteers. Designed to facilitate meaningful interaction between term members and life members and to better integrate term members into the Council's overall activities (in addition to providing them with some valuable career advice), the pilot mentor initiative has elicited an enthusiastic response on both sides. Throughout the program year, term and life members have been in touch at Council receptions and have met over coffee, breakfast, and lunch as their busy schedules have permitted. This successful initiative will continue with a renewed emphasis on developing other opportunities for interaction between term and life members.
