

PUBLICATIONS

One of the most important venues for the dissemination of the work of Council fellows and Independent Task Forces is through Council publications. These publications take a variety of forms in order to reach the broadest range of audiences, from policy experts to the academic community, to business leaders and the general public. Council books are published and marketed by top commercial and university presses. Task Force reports, Council Special Reports, and papers are produced by the Publications Department.

The Council's website is an essential tool for reaching these audiences, and the number of people viewing Council publications through the website is growing. Abstracts and first chapters of most Council books and the full text of reports are available on the website, which also offers links to online bookstores where copies of Council books may be purchased. Finding and reading Council publications online will become easier than ever with the launch of the new website in the fall of 2005.

BOOKS BY COUNCIL FELLOWS AND STAFF

- Bailouts or Bail-ins? Responding to Financial Crises in Emerging Economies, by Nouriel Roubini and Brad Setser. A Council on Foreign Relations Book. Institute for International Economics (2004).
- The Democracy Advantage: How Democracies Promote Prosperity and Peace, by Morton H. Halperin, Joseph T. Siegle, and Michael M. Weinstein. A Council on Foreign Relations Book. Routledge (2005).
- Globalization: What's New?, edited by Michael M. Weinstein. A Council on Foreign Relations Book. Columbia University Press (2005).
- Losing Iraq: Inside the Postwar Reconstruction Fiasco, by David L. Phillips. Westview Press (2005).
- The Opportunity: America's Moment to Alter History's Course, by Richard N. Haass. PublicAffairs (2005).
- Protecting Democracy: International Responses, edited by Morton H. Halperin and Mirna Galic. A Council on Foreign Relations Book. Lexington Books (2005).
- Understanding the War on Terror, edited by James F. Hoge Jr. and Gideon Rose. A Foreign Affairs Book. Council on Foreign Relations Press (2005).
- Unsilencing the Past: Track Two Diplomacy and Turkish-Armenian Reconciliation, by David L. Phillips. Berghahn Books (2004).
- The World's Banker: A Story of Failed States, Financial Crises, and the Wealth and Poverty of Nations, by Sebastian Mallaby. A Council on Foreign Relations Book. Penguin Press (2004).

Praise for Council Books

There is no better introduction to that war—its origins, its perplexities, and its main battles—than Understanding the War on Terror.

—Eliot A. Cohen, Johns Hopkins University's Paul A. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies

Globalization: What's New? is a superb collection of essays, with a sparkling introduction, bringing thoughtful and accessible economic analysis to what ought to be a wide readership.

—Nancy Birdsall, President, Center for Global Development

The Opportunity [by Richard N. Haass] may be laying the groundwork for a counterrevolution. As the intellectual conflict takes shape and grows, his pithy book will undoubtedly become one of the debate's more significant volumes.

—New York Times

Bailouts or Bail-ins? is the most intelligent and comprehensive analysis yet on how the international community should respond to financial crises.

—Barry Eichengreen, University of California, Berkeley

Protecting Democracy: International Responses blends scholarly legal analysis with a comprehensive look at provisions and practices of current international and regional institutions, all grounded in real-life examples of responses to recent democratic breakdowns.

—Jennifer Windsor, Executive Director, Freedom House

Sebastian Mallaby has done something brilliant with The World's Banker. He has used the oversized character of World Bank President Jim Wolfensohn to provide a piercing look at world poverty and the West's ceaseless and sometimes contradictory experiments in fighting it.

—David Maraniss, Washington Post

This valuable and timely volume, The Democracy Advantage, obliterates the myth—beloved of dictators—that democracy is somehow the enemy of development, rather than an essential ally. Here is a treasury of evidence that freedom is not only right—it works.

—Madeleine K. Albright, Former Secretary of State

INDEPENDENT TASK FORCE REPORTS

- Building a North American Community. John P. Manley, Pedro Aspe, and William F. Weld, chairs; Thomas P. d'Aquino, Andrés Rozental, and Robert A. Pastor, vice chairs; Chappell H. Lawson, project director (2005).
- In Support of Arab Democracy: Why and How. Madeleine K. Albright and Vin Weber, co-chairs; Steven A. Cook, project director (2005).
 - Iran: Time for a New Approach. Zbigniew Brzezinski and Robert M. Gates, co-chairs; Suzanne Maloney, project director (2004).

COUNCIL SPECIAL REPORTS

- Forgotten Intervention? What the United States Needs to Do in the Western Balkans, by Amelia Branczik and William L. Nash (2005).
- Freedom, Prosperity, and Security: G8 Partnership with Africa: Sea Island 2004 and Beyond. A CSR Appendix. J. Brian Atwood and Robert S. Brown, co-chairs; Princeton N. Lyman, project director (2005).
- Giving Meaning to "Never Again": Seeking an Effective Response to the Crisis in Darfur and Beyond, by Cheryl O. Igiri and Princeton N. Lyman (2004).
- A New Beginning: Strategies for a More Fruitful Dialogue with the Muslim World, by Craig Charney and Nicole Yakatan (2005).
- Power-Sharing in Iraq, by David L. Phillips (2005).

COUNCIL REPORT

- HIV and National Security: Where Are the Links?, by Laurie Garrett (2005).

For additional information on Council publications and to view the texts available online, visit www.cfr.org.

