

COUNCIL on FOREIGN RELATIONS

1777 F Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006
tel 202.509.8400 fax 202.509.8490 www.cfr.org

Evan A. Feigenbaum

Evan Feigenbaum is senior fellow for East, Central, and South Asia at the Council on Foreign Relations. Initially an academic with a PhD in Chinese politics, his work in both government and the private sector has since spanned all three major regions of Asia.

From 2001 to 2009, he served at the State Department as deputy assistant secretary of state for India, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Bhutan, and Maldives, as well as South Asian regional economic and security affairs (2007-09), deputy assistant secretary of state for Central Asia (2006-07), member of the policy planning staff with principal responsibility for China, Japan, Korea, and Southeast Asia (2001-06), and as an adviser on China to Deputy Secretary of State Robert B. Zoellick, with whom he worked closely in the development of the U.S.-China senior dialogue. During the intensive final phase of the U.S.-India civil nuclear initiative from July to October 2008, he co-chaired the coordinating team charged with moving the agreement through the International Atomic Energy Agency Board of Governors and the Nuclear Suppliers Group, and then to Congress, where it became the U.S.-India Nuclear Cooperation Approval and Nonproliferation Enhancement Act. He received the Department's superior honor award five times.

Prior to government service, Dr. Feigenbaum worked at Harvard University (1997-2001), where he was lecturer on government in the faculty of arts and sciences and executive director of the Asia-Pacific security initiative and program chair of the Chinese security studies program in the John F. Kennedy School of Government. He also taught at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School (1994-95) as lecturer of national security affairs and was a consultant on China to the RAND Corporation (1993-94).

His publications include: The United States in the New Asia (CFR, 2009, co-author), China's Techno-Warriors: National Security and Strategic Competition from the Nuclear to the Information Age (Stanford University Press, 2003; Chinese edition published as Zhonggong Keji Xianqu, Taipei, 2006), and Change in Taiwan and Potential Adversity in the Strait (RAND, 1995). His articles have appeared in journals, edited volumes, and the opinion pages, including The New York Times, International Herald-Tribune, International Security, Survival, Washington Quarterly, China Quarterly, Russia in Global Affairs, Far Eastern Economic Review, and elsewhere.

A native of New York City, he received his PhD and AM in political science from Stanford University and his AB in history from the University of Michigan. He has received awards, prizes, and competitive fellowships, including Olin and Belfer fellowships at Harvard University (1997-99), and spent three years as a fellow of Stanford University's Center for International Security and Cooperation (1994-97). He studied overseas in Beijing, Shanghai, Tokyo, and Taipei. His languages are Chinese and French, with study of Japanese and Korean. He and his wife, Kimberly Foerster, have two children, Alexander and Eliza.

Communications and Marketing

NY: +1.212.434.9888 DC: +1.202.509.8419