Nicole E. Lewis

Nicole Lewis is the national intelligence fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR).

Ms. Lewis joins CFR from the CIA, where she is a member of the Office of Asian Pacific, Latin American, and African Analysis in the Directorate of Intelligence. She served as part of the President's daily brief team, briefing some of the CIA's senior leadership on finished and raw intelligence.

As a fellow, she will focus her research on how China's more visible involvement in multilateral organizations is changing the face of these institutions and how China's growing global role tempers the international community's response to China's treatment of its ethnic minorities. Ms. Lewis is also developing a roundtable series entitled, the View from the Intelligence Community.

Ms. Lewis holds a BA from the College of Charleston and an MA from the American University.
