Peter Navario

Peter Navario is fellow for global health at the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR).

From 2005 until 2008, Navario comanaged the BroadReach Healthcare HIV treatment program in South Africa, leading the departments of monitoring, evaluation and reporting, and information management. He led the evaluation of the World Bank-funded Treatment Access Program (TAP) in Burkina Faso, coordinated HIV program management training for the Ministry of Health in Ethiopia, and authored a position paper on HIV/AIDS resource mobilization and allocation for the United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS). At Baylor College of Medicine, Navario managed a subgrant funded by the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), for health professional training in HIV/AIDS in South Africa, Côte d'Ivoire, Tanzania, and Zambia. He also chaired the Ministry of Health's National HIV/AIDS Health Professional Training Curriculum Committee in Botswana. Navario also conducted an economic analysis of a national perinatal HIV prevention program in Romania; managed a Secure-the-Future (Bristol-Myers Squibb) funded HIV training project in South Africa, Swaziland, Lesotho, and Botswana; and drafted HIV clinical trials with the Pediatric AIDS Clinical Trials Group (PACTG) at the National Institutes of Health.

Navario holds a BA in psychology and French with honors from Lehigh University and a master's degree in global health from Yale University. He recently completed his PhD in health economics at the University of Cape Town's school of economics.
