

COUNCIL on FOREIGN RELATIONS

58 East 68th Street, New York, New York 10065
tel 212.434.9400 fax 212.434.9800 www.cfr.org

Mohamad Bazzi

Mohamad Bazzi is adjunct senior fellow for Middle Eastern studies at the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR). He is also an assistant professor of journalism at New York University, where he teaches international reporting. He was the 2007-2008 Edward R. Murrow press fellow at CFR.

From 2003 until 2007, Bazzi was the Middle East bureau chief at Newsday, based in Beirut and responsible for covering the Arab world. He was the lead writer on the Iraq war and its aftermath, setting up Newsday bureaus in Baghdad and Beirut. He has written extensively about regional politics, Sunni-Shiite tensions, and militant Islam. He also covered the 2000 Palestinian uprising, the 2001 war in Afghanistan, and the 2006 war between Hezbollah and Israel. In nearly ten years on staff at Newsday, he was a metro reporter in New York City and served as the paper's United Nations bureau chief.

His articles and commentaries on the Middle East have appeared in The New York Times Magazine, The Nation, Newsweek, Christian Science Monitor, Chicago Tribune, Salon, Washington Times, Newark Star-Ledger, and The National (Abu Dhabi).

Among Bazzi's awards are the 2008 Arthur Ross Award for distinguished reporting and analysis on foreign affairs (presented by the American Academy of Diplomacy); the 2008 American Academy of Religion Award for in-depth reporting on religion; the 2005 Elizabeth Neuffer Memorial Prize; the 2004 News Analysis Award from the NY Society of the Silurians; the 2004 James Aronson Award for social justice journalism; the 2003 Silver Medal from the United Nations Correspondents Association; and the 2002 Daniel Pearl Award for outstanding print reporting on South Asia.

Communications and Marketing

NY: +1.212.434.9888 DC: +1.202.509.8419