

John Lipsky

John Lipsky is a Senior Fellow of the Foreign Policy Institute of Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS). He also is the President of the Hopkins-Nanjing Council, supporting the Hopkins Nanjing Center, a degree-granting joint venture program with the University of Nanjing.

Previously, he was first deputy managing director of the International Monetary Fund during 2006-20, serving as acting managing director during May-July, 2011. Prior to returning to the IMF, he held positions of vice chairman of JPMorgan Investment Bank, chief economist at JPMorgan Chase, chief economist and director of research at Chase Manhattan Bank, and chief economist at Salomon Brothers. Early in his career, Mr. Lipsky spent 10 years at the International Monetary Fund.

Mr. Lipsky currently is the co-chair of the Aspen Institute's Program on the World Economy; and is the immediate past Chair of the National Bureau of Economic Research. He also is the executive committee vice-chair of the Center for Global Development and a vice-chair of the Bretton Woods Committee. He is a member of the advisory boards of the Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research (SIEPR) and the Rock Creek Group; is a director of the American Council on Germany, and is a life member of the Council on Foreign Relations. He holds a PhD. in economics from Stanford University.