Membership
Membership

Founded in 1921, the Council on Foreign Relations includes among its ranks many of the most prominent leaders in the foreign policy arena. With over five thousand members based throughout the country and around the world, CFR’s roster is composed of government officials, renowned scholars, business leaders, acclaimed journalists, prominent lawyers, and distinguished nonprofit professionals. CFR has a longstanding commitment to a diverse membership that reflects the broad interests of the United States.

The Member Experience

CFR members enjoy unparalleled access to a nonpartisan forum through which they engage with and gain insight from experts in international affairs. Members have in-person access to world leaders, senior government officials, members of Congress, and prominent thinkers and practitioners in academia, policy, and business, many of whom are members themselves. Member events include expert panel discussions, historymaker interviews, CEO forums, symposia, town halls, film screenings, and national and international member trips. For members residing outside New York and Washington, CFR hosts foreign policy seminars in ten cities, local roundtables that build on expertise of area members and community leaders, a national book club series, webcasts, and a conference call series on current events.
Membership Eligibility

CFR offers two types of individual membership: membership, for those above the age of thirty-six, and a five-year term membership, for those between the ages of thirty and thirty-six.

CFR seeks quality, diversity, and balance in its membership. Criteria for membership include intellectual attainment and expertise; degree of experience, interest, and current involvement in international affairs; promise of future achievement and service in foreign relations; potential contributions to CFR’s work; desire and ability to participate in CFR activities; and standing among peers.

“The Council on Foreign Relations after ninety years remains at its core a membership organization.”
—Richard N. Haass, CFR President
Applying for Individual Membership

Membership
CFR membership is restricted to U.S. citizens and permanent residents who have formally applied to become citizens. Candidates applying for membership must be above the age of thirty-six, nominated in writing by a CFR member, and seconded by three to four other individuals.

The annual application deadlines are March 1 and November 1. New members are elected each June and February.

Term Membership
The Stephen M. Kellen Term Member Program, established to cultivate the next generation of foreign policy leaders, encourages promising young women and men to engage in sustained conversation on international affairs and U.S. foreign policy. CFR term membership is restricted to U.S. citizens and permanent residents who have formally applied to become citizens. Candidates for term membership must be between thirty and thirty-six years of age on January 1, nominated in writing by a CFR member, and seconded by two to three other individuals.

The annual application deadline is January 3. New term members are elected each June.

How to Apply
To apply, complete the membership application request form at cfr.org/membership/individual-membership.

For additional information, please visit cfr.org/membership or contact Membership at applications@cfr.org or 212.434.9456.
CFR President Richard N. Haass (far right) discusses Canada’s global outlook with Canadian Minister of International Trade Diversification Jim Carr, Canadian Minister of Foreign Affairs Chrystia Freeland, and Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau.

Left: Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg speaks at CFR’s Washington, DC, office. Right: South Korean President Moon Jae-in delivers an address on South Korea’s alliance with the United States.
CFR Mission

The Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) is an independent, nonpartisan membership organization, think tank, and publisher dedicated to being a resource for its members, government officials, business executives, journalists, educators and students, civic and religious leaders, and other interested citizens in order to help them better understand the world and the foreign policy choices facing the United States and other countries. CFR takes no institutional positions on matters of policy.

To learn more, please see the Annual Report at cfr.org/annual-report-2018.