Anne Van Praagh is Managing Director and Head of Moody's Credit Strategy & Research. In this capacity Anne leads a team that defines and develops macroeconomic views and provides strategic insights on emerging risk trends and credit developments. Anne also heads MIS Research and that role drives research strategy and content, product management, production and support for 25,000 research reports published annually.

Prior to her current role, Anne was Managing Director in Moody's Sovereign Risk Group from August 2014 to July 2016, leading teams in the Americas, Asia Pacific and Middle East regions, with responsibility for ratings on roughly 90 countries and multilateral development banks. Until August 2014, Anne was Chief Credit Officer for Public Sector Ratings, responsible for the ratings performance and consistency of Moody's credit standards and methodologies across the global sovereign, sub-sovereign and US public finance franchises.

Anne re-joined Moody's in June 2009 following three years as an investment banker at Morgan Stanley. During the preceding eight years, Anne worked as a lead analyst on a variety of Moody's rating teams. Anne also previously worked for US Office of Management and Budget and US Department of Defense. She has a Master's degree from Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs and a Bachelor's degree from George Washington University's Elliott School of International Affairs.
